

Run For It!

A workshop for new candidates considering running for local elected office.

What do elected officials really do?
How do you know if you're qualified?
How do you deal with negative feedback in a small town?
How do you run in a challenging race?
How do you get on the ballot?

This is your chance to ask questions and discuss your fears and concerns in a supportive environment.

Your community needs you.

In April of 2020, Bayfield County will elect more than 50 decision-making officials.

These are county board members, school board members, town supervisors and city council members.

About 20% of local elected officials holding office are women, and 80% are men.

Most candidates will run unopposed.

To be placed on the ballot, many positions require action to be taken in December 2019.
